All athletic activities carry a risk that can lead to serious injury, disability, including permanent disability, and even death. The district takes measures to teach prevention through safe skills, techniques, and tactics and to provide proper protective equipment as allowed by the New York State Public High School Athletic Association. In return for the privilege to play sports comes the responsibility for each student athlete not only to display good sportsmanship and citizenship, but also to recognize when they may have been injured or are not feeling well and may need help. Coaches and assistant coaches and athletic trainers are there to help, but cannot read minds. Please educate your child that if they feel in distress of any sort to stop playing and tell an adult and seek help. They should never go into play if they are having trouble thinking, breathing, feeling faint or dizzy, having chest pain, or experiencing any symptoms like a racing heart that could indicate a serious problem brewing. Tell them to tell someone. Our moto is “when in doubt, sit it out”.

I understand the importance of educating my child about alerting an adult if they need help. I certify the above answers are accurate to the best of my knowledge:
